Trouble Last Night in a Chinese

"No tickee, no washee," is the motto of nost of the celestial laurdrymen, and the failure of Lung Hing to depart from this ule caused trouble in his wash house, at 15th and L streets, last night, and a homicide came near resulting. A colored man named Matthews was the cause of the trouble. The colored man is much larger than the almond-eyed celestial, but the latter was able to cope with him in the matter of pugilism and prevented the use of a large pistol. Lung Hing did not run when there was treuble about the wash, but held to the big colored man and screamed at the top of his voice, until assistance reached him. When a citizen rushed into the laundry he found the Chinaman and African struggling for possession of the weapon.

"Is this your pistol?" the Chinaman was asked, after the citizen had relieved the belligerents of it.

asked, after the citizen had relieved the belligerents of it.
"Not my pistol," he answered. "He shootee me—shootee me."
The weapon had not been discharged. Policeman O'Donoghue reached the scene of the trouble and arrested Matthews. This morning the cases were tried in Judge Miller's ccurt, and the prisoner denied that the pistol belonged to him, but there were some tell-tale bullets in his pocket, and for concealed weapons he was given six months. On a charge of assaulting the Chinaman a sentence of sixty days was imposed.
